- 25X1 1. In 1945,  unidentified Soviet advisors in Ulan Bator, Outer Mongolia, had reported that they could easily "arrange" a public petition in Outer Mongolia requesting Stalin to admit that area into the USSR as either a union republic or an autonomous SSR.
- 25X1 2. Molotov  was the chief antagonist to this plan, and he refused to approve any such scheme. He notified the Soviet chief representative  at Ulan Bator that any move for separation of Outer Mongolia from China was to be completely spontaneous. Molotov's exact words were that "the arm of Moscow must not show".
- 25X1 3.  the Soviets laid great stress on the refinement of horse cavalry tactics in the Mongolian Army. The supply of Mongolian ponies was good. The Mongolian Army's chief problem was identical with the common public health problem of syphilis.
- 25X1 4.
- 25X1 5.  Soviet Army provided small arms and bread to the Mongols.  no points of disagreement between the Soviet and Mongolian armies.
